Phil has been practicing utility law, with an emphasis on administrative litigation, since 1997. He relishes the opportunity to be a zealous “stand-up” advocate for his clients. His diverse practice runs the regulated industry gamut, including electric and gas, telecommunications, and transportation matters before state regulatory commissions, arbitration tribunals, and in federal and state court.

In the utility sector, Phil has broad experience with PURPA, cooperative law, renewable energy, and a variety of cost of service, ratemaking and financing issues. On the energy front Phil has represented both electric and gas utilities, and in some instance state public utilities commissions, dealing with resource planning, PURPA, ratemaking, EV, infrastructure and beneficial electrification issues. For telecom clients, he has experience with intercarrier compensation, interconnection, universal service, 911, ratemaking, access to infrastructure and rights of way, and in acquiring regulatory approvals related to sales, transfers of control, and financings. In the transportation arena, Phil has represented taxi companies, transportation network companies, and governmental transportation districts, in both regulatory rulemakings and administrative litigation proceedings.

Earlier in his career, as Associate General Counsel at Qwest Corporation, Phil headed a group of attorneys responsible for all of the company’s general regulatory matters, including network regulatory and regulatory compliance issues. Mr. Roselli was the lead regulatory lawyer on a number of high profile multi-jurisdictional matters, including the sale of local telephone exchanges in nine states.
