2023 Calendar of Important Dates for Broadcasters¹

With the beginning of the new year, it is time to prepare for the regulatory dates and deadlines for broadcasters in the next twelve months. While the Federal Communications Commission remains divided with two Democrats and two Republicans, with one open seat, any major decisions with partisan policy differences may continue to be slow to occur. So, until that open seat is filled, don't look for any resolution of the long-pending Quadrennial Review looking to review the local radio ownership rules (and some TV ownership restrictions as well). But routine regulatory filings, dates, and deadlines remain to fill a broadcaster's calendar. These include the requirement to prepare an annual Equal Employment Opportunity ("EEO") public inspection file report, to upload quarterly issues/programs lists to the public file, and to pay annual FCC regulatory fees. This year will also bring the obligation applicable to all broadcasters – to file Biennial Ownership Reports by December 1. TV stations also have children's television obligations at the end of January.

To help keep track of many of these obligations, we have put together this advisory to preview many of the important FCC compliance-related dates, as well as other deadlines broadly applicable to significant portions of the broadcast industry. The calendar is not intended to cover all filing dates and deadlines that apply to every station or licensee. Instead, the calendar is meant to highlight some of the more critical deadlines that we can identify in advance. Remember, these dates can change, and new deadlines for action can be added, so be sure to keep up with the latest developments.

In the last four years, we have been dealing with the license renewal cycle that began in 2019 with radio renewal applications in the Washington, DC area. Since then, every other month, there were deadlines for renewal applications for radio or TV stations (or both) in certain states. Now, only TV renewals in four states remain - New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware – with renewals for stations in the last two states being due in April. This will close the renewal filing cycle. The next renewal cycle does not begin until 2027.

2023, while not having many routine elections, will likely begin to see political activity leading to the 2024 Presidential election and, depending on the final dates that are set for the earliest 2024 primaries, we may even see Lowest Unit Charge windows opening late in the year (or in January 2024). But remember that there are always special elections and local elections that occur outside the big state and national election cycles. Special and local elections give rise to the same political broadcasting obligations that arise in connection with elections that occur in even-numbered years. With the FCC's recent scrutiny of station compliance with the political broadcasting rules, broadcasters need to be paying careful attention to the legal requirements that attach to any political advertising. This is particularly true for the requirements to upload information to your online public inspection file about candidate and issue advertising. Do not forget that some political file obligations arise with all political advertising – even outside the political windows. So, even though no lowest unit charge windows are listed on this calendar, remember that political obligations do apply.

In our calendar, we provide a description of the obligation, the due date, and the place where compliance is required (e.g., through an FCC filing, an upload to the public file, or through some on-air obligation). Broadcasters have online public file obligations, and they must ensure that the required documentation (such as the annual EEO public inspection file report or quarterly issues/programs lists) is uploaded by the applicable deadline to the station's FCC-hosted online public file. The online public file makes these deadlines even more important, as interested parties (including the FCC) no longer need to come to your station and wade through paper files to review whether you have met your public file obligations. Instead, they can review your file anywhere there is an Internet connection and assess your compliance with the various public file obligations. In the last few years, we saw hundreds of stations enter into consent decrees with the FCC or pay fines because of a failure to timely upload documents to the public file. Don't let your station be caught with late uploads or an incomplete public file.

As the year unfolds, there will no doubt be other compliance deadlines that arise, including comment periods for various rulemakings. We try to provide information about many of these deadlines, and news about other regulatory issues, on our blog: www.broadcastlawblog.com. Check the blog regularly, sign-up for email alerts about new posts, or get in touch with any of the attorneys in our Broadcast Group for more information about the many deadlines and other issues that will be important to broadcasters in 2023.

With that background and an important reminder to check with your accountant, tax advisor, and local counsel on dates for filings such as those relating to local business and real estate fees and taxes, filing dates for Equal Employment Opportunity Commission submissions for large employers, and other requirements that may be applicable to your station(s), some important dates for 2023 are set out in the calendar that follows.
